THE WINDOW OF THE SOUL

Are the eyes like black, brown or blue? It matters not in what their shade or hue, so long as they are loving, tender, true. They may be blue as bluest summer sky—Or brown and black in deepest shades may vie. I love the soul which meets mine through the eye.

The eyes which tell me all I care to know, Whose orbs with sympathetic fervor glow And all the heart within me bestow—

The wide world beholdeth none that can excel The wide world beholdeth none that can excel.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 9, 1895.

A CANDID ENGLISHMAN.

Griffith Boscowen, a Conservative member of the House of Commons and private Secretary to the Chancellor of the Exchequer, is in San Francisco. He tells the Chronicle that he is naturally anxious to hear what Americans think of the silver question. He has no opinion of his own as yet in respect to the coinage question, nor does he think the Chancellor of the Exchequer has decided the question to his entire satisfaction and he is unable to predict which side the Chancellor will take. There is a strong bimetallic feeling in England, but there is also a strong feeling for monometallicism. England is the creditor nation. It loans money to other nations and requires interest in gold. Whether it would be better to adopt a bimetallic standard and give the producer a better chance is one of the leading questions of the day in England. Were he an American he would be a bimetallist, but as an Englishman he is as yet undecided. The English producer cannot compete with those countries which have a silver standard. The Argentine farmer pays for everything on a silver basis and he receives gold for his wheat. By this practice he gets twice as much for his wheat as the English farmer. If a bimetallic standard was adopted there would be more money in circulation and the English producer would get better prices for his products. Considering the fact, however, that England is a creditor nation and is interested in seeing her credits paid in gold, the question becomes complicated and extremely difficult of solution.

THE TRIAL OF DURRANT.

That is a candid admission. It is made by a gentleman who is evidently not connected with the gold trust. He is satisfied that the adoption of the bimetallic standard would put more money in circulation and advance the prices of products and were he an American he would be a silver man. But England is a creditor nation. It loans money and receives interest in gold, therefore it clings to the single gold standard. Though the farmers are impoverished by this policy the nation at large is probably gainer by it and the gold standard is maintained because other nations are its debtors.

It is unfortunate that those who make laws for the United States are not as patriotic as Mr. Boscowen. He would be a bimetallist, if an American, because his is a debtor nation and a farming nation, but the majority of our law makers uphold the gold standard, though it is ruining the masses of the people, because the gold syndicate assists in electing them and dictates the policy of the party with which they affiliate.

OPPOSED TO ENFRANCHISEMENT.

While the enlightened women of the Far West are demanding a privilege that is accorded the most ignorant men, their benighted sisters in the Far East are crying out against woman suffrage. In the great State of New York an Anti-Woman Suffragist Society has been organized, which is composed exclusively of women. Mrs. John V. Pruin, who is President of the society, has issued an address, in which she says the committee of women organized to oppose the amendment to the Constitution striking out the word "male" in the qualification for voters, appeal to "the electors of the State to take pains to secure the nomination and election of members of the Legislature who are known to be opposed to the imposition upon women of the unwelcome and unsatisfactory responsibilities of the ballot."

The dear, simple anti-woman suffragists of New York are so innocent and unsophisticated that they consider their enfranchisement "an unwelcome and unsatisfactory responsibility." They do not seem to understand that striking the word "male" from the Constitution in the qualification for voters does not compel them to assume the unsatisfactory responsibility of voters. While a few of them may not desire to assume those responsibilities, others may wish to do so, and as there is no law to compel men or women to vote against their will they need not assume the responsibility unless they want to. Hundreds of thousands of men who are entitled to vote do not go to the polls, and women, if endowed with the right of suffrage, need not exercise the right unless they feel disposed to go to the polls.

PUBLIC LANDS.

The annual report of the commissioner of the General Land office to the Secretary of the Interior, shows a decrease of 19,008 land entries as compared with 1894. In the fiscal year 1895 there were 6,016,685 less acres entered than in 1894 and the decrease in cash receipts amounted to $734,370.

Regarding the legislation of the last Congress granting lands to states for irrigation purposes the commissioner believes that in the near future it will be necessary to create a national commission to regulate the distribution of waters which have their sources in a superadjacent state and which are used in common by the people of that and the superadjacent state.

The Commissioner makes several recommendations among them a law to compel the attendance of witnesses at land offices in contest cases; an appropriation for the establishment of forest reservoirs and the protection of existing reservations; legislation for the protection and disposal of public lands; placing the public land surveys under the Geological Survey and the establishment of a land office in Alaska.

It appears that the dull times and low prices for farm products is affecting the sale of public land as well as other business as the entries were over six millions of acres less than in the year ending June 30th 1894.

Much as the Treasury Department desires gold up to the $100,000,000 limit, it is annoyed by the fact that gold is being offered at the Treasury in exchange for silver notes. The people want small silver notes for change, and the Government has neither silver nor silver dollars to supply the demand, nor will it coin standard dollars, though it has abundance of silver bullion on hand and could coin the dollars at a profit. The policy is to limit the supply of money and it would make the gold men angry to coin silver.

The Chicago papers just received say the Republican primaries held in that city last week were disgrace to civilization. There were two factions, the city and the county, and broken heads, black eyes and bloody noses were the order of the day. The convention was held next day and it looked like a military hospital after a hard battle. Forty policemen were on duty at the hall to keep the peace. The county faction had a majority and carried things with a high hand.

The Sierra State has entered upon its forty-first volume. To say that it is the best paper of its inches published, but expresses the opinion of its readers. "May it live long and prosper."

MISS CUNNINGHAM ALLOWED TO GO FREE.

An Attempt to Impeach the Testimony of an Important Witness.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 8.—Judge Murphy to-day decided that he had no power to punish Miss Carrie Cunningham, a newspaper reporter, for contempt of court. During the trial of the Durrant case last week Miss Cunningham was called to the stand by the defense and asked to tell where she had obtained certain information relative to Mrs. Leek's testimony. When Miss Cunningham first refused to answer the question, Judge Murphy announced that he would send her to prison for contempt, but to-day decided that he had no power and he said that the defense had no right to ask the question, as it could not impeach Mrs. Leek's testimony.

The Court also reversed the ruling made last week by which the defense was deprived of an opportunity of asking Dr. Cheney if he was not positive in his own mind that Durrant attended the lectures at Cooper Medical College on April 3d. The Court said that while he believed that the question was objectionable, as it called for the opinion of the witness, he would permit Dr. Cheney to answer it, as he desired to err on the side of the defense if he erred at all. Dr. Cheney will be recalled to the stand to-day. The defense this morning resumed the calling of witnesses to show the previous good record of Durrant.

When Dr. Cheney took the stand the defense declined to ask the questions formerly ruled out by the Court. An effort was made to impeach the testimony of Mrs. Crossett by calling to the stand L. Everett, a boy who told how long it took him to ride on a street car from Sacramento and Walnut streets to Twenty-second and Valencia streets. The purpose of the testimony was to show that Mrs. Crossett could not have made the trip between the two points on the afternoon of April 3d, when she swore she saw Durrant and Blanche Lamont, in the time given by the witness. Everett's testimony was corroborated by Marvin Curtis.

THE SITUATION IN CONSTANTINOPLE.

ARMENIANS AFRAID TO GO TO THEIR HOMES.

CONSTANTINOPLE, October 8.—The Sultan has twice sent Afin Pasha to the Patriarchate to co-operate with the Patriarch in his efforts to induce the Armenians, who sought refuge in the churches, to return to their homes. All efforts in this direction, however, proved futile, the Armenians declaring they had no confidence in the promises of protection made by the Turkish Government. Ninety-five bodies have been delivered to the officials of the Patriarchate by the order of the Sultan and it is claimed that they represent all of the Armenians killed in the recent rioting.

A BATTLE WITH SHOVELS.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., October 8.—George Meadowick and William Frank, two blast furnace employees, had a pitched battle with heavy shovels this morning. Frank having his scalp badly cut and skull fractured. His injuries will prove fatal. Meadowick was arrested and held without bail.

General Mahone Dead.

WASHINGTON, October 8.—General Mahone died this afternoon, aged 60. He was called the "Hero of the Crater" by the Confederate army. After the war he was a United States Senator from Virginia, and the leader of the Virginia Republicans.

AFTER THE SPORTS.

PAPERS OUT FOR THE ARREST OF SEVERAL OF THEM.

Governor Culberson Determined on Suppressing the Two Fighters.

DALLAS, Tex., October 8.—W. M. Wheelock, secretary of the Florida Athletic Club, was served with papers this morning to appear before the Grand Jury at Austin. Papers are also out for W. A. Brady, Corbett's manager, Martin Julian, manager of Fitzsimmons, and presumably for Dan A. Stuart, Joe Vendig and others, all of whom may be arrested before night.

The papers are issued on the authority of article 980 of the Texas Penal Code which provides: "That a conspiracy entered into in this State for the purpose of committing any felony in any other of the States or Territories of the United States, or any foreign territory, shall be punished in the same manner as if the conspiracy so entered into was to commit an offense against this State."

The penalty for such conspiracy is confinement in the penitentiary for not less than two nor more than five years.

Governor Culberson and Attorney-General Crane have apparently determined on a war to the knife against Stuart, and they proposed the prosecution of him and his associates at Austin on the alleged violation of the new anti-prize fight law, which makes prize-fighting a felony. It looks as if the only way out of the trouble is to test the new law on the ground of its unconstitutionality.

The President Will Not Interfere.

SAN FRANCISCO, October 8.—United States Marshal Baldwin received word to-day that President Cleveland had refused to interfere in the cases of Hans Hansen and Thomas St. Clair, convicted of the murder of the mate of the bark Hesper, and sentenced to death. An appeal was made to the President as the last resort. Both men will be hanged at San Quentin on Friday, October 18th.

Brigadier-General Appointed.

SACRAMENTO, October 8.—Governor Budd has at last relieved the tension under which the military circles have been straining for the last nine months. This morning he appointed C. F. A. Last of Los Angeles as Brigadier-General of the Second Brigade, and M. W. Muller of Fresno as Brigadier-General of the Third Brigade. General Last is a wholesale liquor dealer, and General Muller is a grain merchant and warehouseman. Governor Budd is still in Stockton.

PURITY OF ELECTIONS LAW.
Hon. Thomas Wren on Its Enforcement.

Editor's Sentinel: A doubting Thomas is occasionally heard to say that the purity of elections law cannot be enforced. Why not? All admit that it is a good law. The law makes ample provision for its enforcement by both criminal and civil procedure. Are the people of this State so corrupt or so indifferent to the enforcement of a good law that they will permit corruptists to violate it with impunity? I do not believe it. Every good citizen should not only favor its rigid enforcement, but each one should lend efficient aid in enforcing it.

The man who owns property is or should be conservative, and in favor of strictly enforcing all good laws, especially this one. Its strict enforcement means the election of fewer bad men to the Legislature and to county offices. It will result in the passage of better laws, and a better administration of the laws passed, and in a more economical administration of public business, in the reduction of taxation, and a corresponding increase in property values and the profits of all kinds of business. It will elevate the moral tone of the people, and raise the elective franchise to the dignified position it should occupy. The man of property not only has the interest that every patriotic citizen, rich or poor, has or should have in purity of elections, but he has an additional pecuniary interest. His influence is potent in every community, and let us trust that, independent of party considerations, it will be used in the right direction in all future political contests.

But while the man of property is deeply interested in the enforcement of the purity of elections law, the poor man is doubly so; in fact, the law may fittingly be termed the poor man's law. It affords him ample protection from all kinds of intimidation. It stamps as a felon the man who would tempt him to sell his birthright for a mess of pottage. By restricting the amount of money a candidate may spend to secure his election, and by restricting the expenditure to legitimate expenses, and by prohibiting the purchase of votes or obtaining them by promises of office or employment, he is enabled to run for office on even terms with the rich man. The rich man now enjoys social and other privileges not accorded to the poor man. The constant tendency of corporate and individual wealth is to enlarge those privileges, and to deprive a poor man by bribery, by intimidation and by promises of employment and other means of his political equality. This law is admirably adapted to check that tendency.

The man, however, who is most deeply interested in the enforcement of the law is the man who is a candidate for office. Under the present corrupt system, as soon as a candidate's name is announced, whenever he appears on the street the "bummers" "strike" him for fifty cents to "eat on;" a committee levies an assessment upon him for party purposes; the political blackmailer demands $250 to be placed in a pool to buy votes; he must travel from precinct to precinct with a demijohn of whisky under one arm and a box of cigars under the other. At each saloon he is expected to "set 'em up," for the boys, and on the day of election he is besieged from morning until night by voters who demand money and by messengers from clubs of ten who are willing to sell their votes to the highest bidder. At last the end comes. Night closes over this carnival of corruption. He has spent all of his own money and all he could borrow from friends. If successful, it will require many months of his salary and other official perquisites to repay them. If unsuccessful, he is financially ruined, disappointed and heartbroken; burdened with debt he becomes plodding, plodding, plodding to get even with the world again.

The successful candidate may not have paid out for election expenses quite all his office is worth, but it is reasonably certain that the aggregate expenses of all the candidates for an office amount frequently to more than the office is worth. The whole corrupt system is accrued and in sapping the foundations of republican government, and the man or men who seek to perpetuate it should be forever politically damned.

To the past men have winked at these corrupt political practices, satisfying their consciences with the spacious excuses that the other party was guilty of doing so; that they had to "fight the devil with fire"; that the end justified the means, and so on. With the purity of elections law upon the statute book there is not the faintest show of justification in such excuses.

But I am admonished by the length of this letter that I must close. Later I shall endeavor to show that the enforcement of this law is all important to the position of influence and importance he held before this reign of corruption set in. THOMAS WREN.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

A SAD DEATH.

Fred Hamlin, a Popular Young Man, Passes Away After a Long Illness.

Fred, eldest son of S. A. Hamlin, died at a late hour on Monday night after a lingering illness. He has been sick for over three years and has suffered terribly. He has received the best of medical aid, both here and in California, and his father and mother have been untiring in their efforts to humor him in every wish, in the hope that he might be restored to health. He was taken to California, and different localities in that State were tried at the suggestion of physicians and friends, but while he would show an improvement for a time that would give his parents and relatives a ray of hope, it would only be temporary, and gradually the disease sapped his life. He was patient through it all, and when the summons came to relieve him of his suffering he fell asleep, never to awaken on this earth.

He had made a brave fight for life, but when he realized that there was little hope he as bravely met the inevitable. He was a favorite with his associates and a young man who would, had he lived, made his mark in the world. He had just passed the mile post of his majority, and was ready to begin an active and useful life. His parents and relatives have the sympathy of the whole community in this hour of their great sorrow.

The funeral will take place from the Baptist Church this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Friends and acquaintances are invited to attend.

PRIZE-FIGHTING PROHIBITED.

It is Declared to Be a Felony in This State.

It was reported at Carson that leading citizens of the town would hang up a purse of $100,000 for Corbett and Fitzsimmons to fight for. The Appeal says this caused a ferment of excitement, as the cost of a pavilion to seat 10,000 people at $20 a seat would not exceed $50,000, and there would be a clear profit of $50,000 to the stockholders.

There was a rush for stock, and notice was served on the promoters of the scheme that they could get it all subscribed for in a week. The promoters thought that under the law of 1893 allowing athletic exhibitions the fight could be pulled off.

The Governor at once notified Attorney-General Beatty to hunt up the law, and see how the matter stood. The latter reported that the law of 1877 made prize-fighting a felony, punishable by a term of two years, and that the act of 1893 related to athletic clubs.

The Governor said he would then enforce the law as long as it remained on the statute books, and that he would see that no prize-fight took place in the State.

GRAND JURY DRAWN.

AN HONEST JOCKEY.

The Carson Appeal gives Auburn Campbell, a Reno boy, quite an extended and complimentary notice regarding his squareness as a race-rider. He has had chances to make money by throwing a race, but has always rode to win. By doing this he has gained the confidence of the sporting men, and when he has a mount his friends have confidence he will win if the horse can get there. Auburn is the son of Barney Campbell of our town, and his father feels a natural pride in the good reputation that his boy has gained as a rider.

SCHOOL REPORT.

Following is the report of the Anderson district school for the month ending September 27th:

Number of boys enrolled, 9; number of girls, 7. Total, 16.

ROLL OF HONOR—Hattie Peckham 97, Bessie Welden 98, Bertie Welden 97, Hughana Pringle 97, Maggie Pringle 97, Elsie Demeret 97, Charlie Sparks 96.

A LEONET OFFICIAL.

The Carson Tribune says that Francis K. Delaney of Reno was before Justice Hawthorne yesterday on a charge of burglary. His attorney stated that the defendant had friends in Reno whom he expected would release him from his trouble, and the Justice allowed him until to-morrow morning at 10 o'clock to plead.

THE CITY.
The lines in my garden blow,
While meadows ring my garden round.
In the green wood wild violets grow,
And pale frail flowers now are found.
For all you see and all you hear,
The city might be miles away,
And yet you feel the city near,
Through all the quiet of the day.

Say, suns the earth, new washed with rain,
With leaves green in the bright pale,
And in the wind, pale, the lute,
I sing, the bright, the bright.
The soft, the soft, was about me like,
A dream in deep, deep delight,
To sing all the silence of the night.

For me the steamer meets and sings,
With the sun her garland wears,
The steamer fields her glossy wings,
And with her, my cutting edges,
I can feel the faint heart,
To tell all day his sad slave sleep,
And when at last the night is here,
He leaves moving in his sleep.

For a little space of ground,
A soft, a flower should make me gay,
With a little of meadow lark me round,
And leaves and flowers of silence lay,
For a wild lark, in excess down,
A little night, and a lonely way,
A voice deep enough to drown
The voice that meets me night and day!

—New York Tribune.

CHINESE CORDON.
The famous Englishman's Resignation and Prophetic Message to the Khedive.

A correspondent writing to The Scottish American says: One chilly morning in a snow, in the winter of 1879-80, I received a message from Colonel Gordon. He had just landed from Suez, and wished to see me. I found him seated in a room at the old Suez hotel, with the black secretary and trusty factotum, M. Lameh El Tcham, and a few friends, including the governor of the town.

Poor Mohamed El Tcham, who was destined to see his master fall at Khartoum and probably shared his fate, was ailing and miserable, and I noticed he was sipping some hot mixture of which the aroma did not seem familiar.

On my entering, Gordon exclaimed:

"I have resigned the governorship of the Sudan and am returning to England. The khedive's ministers dared to read me instructions, and so I have resigned. Now, tell me honestly, what will the world say of my work in the Sudan after the years I have spent there? What is the apparent result?"

I said something to the effect that his name would live and be remembered.

"Aye," he rejoined, "but what visible trace remains of my exile and labor? It is now God's will that I should abandon my task, and there is absolutely nothing to show—notting for the world to gaze at except"—he added this with a curious smile and pointing to the shivering son of the tropics at the other side of the table—"except, perhaps, that I have taught my Mohammedan secretary to drink hot toddy at 10 in the morning."

Certainly Gordon's work was not intended for show. At Alexandria he had an audience with the late khedive, Tewfik Pasha, at which he tendered his resignation, and then, removing his fez, the badge of allegiance, addressed some words of stirring advice to his highness, as from an independent English gentleman. Before embarking for Europe Gordon wrote a famous telegram to the khedive—"Mene, Mene, Tekel, Upharsin"—which was shown to me and to the correspondent of a great London newspaper, but it is a question whether it was ever dispatched from Mafra. In any case, it was curiously prophetic. Within two years the Sudan was in open revolt and Egypt under foreign control.

Data Aviso to Interference.

At the corner of Fourth avenue and Smithfield street a lady from Glenwood entered a crowded outgoing car. The conductor knew who she was and that she resided in Glenwood. He suspected that she had made a mistake, and that she thought she was on a Second avenue car, so he crowded up the aisle and politely inquired:

"Where are you going, lady?"
That's my business," she tartly replied.

The conductor said nothing more, and the car sped along through the dark, crossing the Monongahela through the covered Sixth street bridge and rapidly putting space between it and Glenwood. When it entered the big Knoxville incline elevator and stopped, nobody said a word. After a minute's wait up the precipice it started, leaving the sparkling electric lights far below.

"My goodness," screamed the Glenwood woman to the conductor, "where is this car going?"

"That's my business," dryly replied the conductor.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Doubtful Sympathy.

Pat Regan had a face on him that, as he had once remarked himself, was an "affine to the landscape." Next to his helplessness his poverty was the most conspicuous part of him. An Irish neighbor met him recently, when the following colloquy ensued:

"An how are ye, Pat?"

"Mighty bad, intirely. It's a starvation that's burnin' me in the face."

"Is that so? Sure, an it can't be very pleasant for nyther of yez."—Montana Columbian.

A Patriot's Dinner.

Marion, the American Revolutionary general, once feasted an English officer on sweet potatoes baked in the fire by a darky and served on a strip of bark, with a log for a table. It is said the officer resigned and went home, saying it was no use to try to conquer people who could live on sweet potatoes.

Chancellor Ale.

At Oxford there is what is called "chancellor ale," brewed out of 16 bushels of malt to the barrel, and so strong that two wineglasses will intoxicate most people. It is kept in cask, bell shaped casks, and is never tapped until it is two years old. Some of the casks have been in use for half a century, but "chancellor ale" is only used at high table, when a man takes very high honors.

When the common earthworm is cut in two to the tail, there grows a head, and to the head there grows a tail, and two animals are formed. As the wound heals a small white button is formed, which afterward develops into rings and a perfect extremity.

Shakera.

The Shakers had their peculiar designation given to them in derision. During the religious excitements which were encouraged by their form of worship, members of this sect often fell into convulsive tremblings, sometimes ending in partial or total unconsciousness, and this singular phenomenon gave a name to the sect.
